Bees come first

Volunteer commitment to beekeeping, nature and biodiversity

We take only the surplus

Before honey reaches our table, it feeds the bees. We leave every colony the stores it needs. Weather, flowering and colony development guide our work: when a harvest is not possible, all the honey remains with the bees.

Understanding bees, sharing knowledge

Honey bees and respectful care for every colony are at the heart of our association. We observe colony development closely, explain how beekeeping and biodiversity are connected, and share practical knowledge. The Asian hornet is discussed where it directly affects bee protection, while the bee itself remains our central focus.

Careful, regional and sustainable

Regional bee products, hand-crafted beeswax candles and packaging chosen to be durable or reusable wherever possible combine enjoyment with responsible use of natural resources.

Two harvests, two characters

Both honeys come in 500 g jars, shaped by blossom, weather and season

HON-001

Spring honey

€8 • 500 g

Mild and delicate. Its high rapeseed content gives it a pale colour and a beautifully balanced flavour, ideal at breakfast, on bread or for cooking.

HON-002

Summer and autumn honey

€8 • 500 g

Fuller, more robust and aromatic. Raspberry and blackberry blossom, along with linden, give this later harvest its expressive seasonal character.

For memorable moments

Two distinctive honey specialties for sharing, celebrating and giving

GET-001

Hunnegdröpp

€20 • 500 ml

A distinctive honey liqueur whose recipe we have refined for more than five years. Many trials and subtle adjustments have shaped its balanced character. Warm honey notes and carefully judged sweetness make it a pleasure after dinner, for a toast or as a gift.

GET-002

Honey wine

€9

A characterful honey wine with a delicate honey note, made for convivial and festive occasions. Served well chilled, it is an excellent choice for raising a glass and an original gift from the apiary.

Three varieties of sour honey

Made mainly with apple cider vinegar and honey, plus selected herbs for each recipe

OXY-001

Sage oxy-mel

€12 • 200 ml

Herbal and aromatic. Sage is traditionally associated with the mouth, throat and digestion. Dilute 1:10 with water or tea.

OXY-002

Ginger and lemon

€15 • 250 ml

Fresh, citrusy and gently spicy. Ginger and lemon create a lively, aromatic drink. Add 1-2 tbsp to a glass of water or lukewarm tea.

OXY-003

Mint oxy-mel

€12 • 200 ml

Cooling and refreshing. Mint is traditionally enjoyed for its pleasant feel after a meal. Dilute 1:10 with water or tea.

Oxymel is a traditional product intended for enjoyment. Our exact recipe remains confidential. It is not a substitute for medical treatment. Pregnant or breastfeeding women should avoid sage oxymel.

How we recover our wax

Bees produce wax themselves and use it to build the colony's comb. Wax from our apiary is collected and separated by origin. It is then melted gently, cleared of coarse residue and carefully filtered several times. This valuable natural material stays in the cycle and becomes the basis of our candles.

Figures full of character

From wax to candle

Once cleaned, the beeswax is warmed slowly and gently. The mould and wick are prepared for each design before the liquid wax is poured by hand. The candle is given time to cool and set, then carefully removed, checked and finished by hand. Small variations in colour, surface and weight are part of the natural material and the craft process: every candle is unique.

Why targeted action matters

The Asian hornet hunts honey bees in front of the hive and can place severe pressure on colonies. A carefully positioned and regularly serviced trap supports control and monitoring. Regular checks are essential to protect other insects.

Travel within a 15 km radius of Mersch is included; beyond this, €1 per additional kilometre.
